

Physiotherapy

Ross Memorial Hospital has two inpatient physiotherapy services. One service is for acute care patients, including orthopaedic patients, stroke patients and patients with other acute care disorders. There is a physiotherapist and a rehabilitation assistant who provide these services. There is also a small gym for physiotherapy patients.

The other inpatient physiotherapy service is provided to complex continuing care and rehabilitation patients. These programs are similar to those for acute care patients, however, they are planned over a longer period of time.
