The Ross Memorial Hospital Foundation Report

October 2005

VOLUME II, ISSUE 10

Giving Thanks Tradition of Giving Program

October is often a time where one takes the opportunity to reflect on the year's accomplishments, while giving thanks to those who have made a difference.

The cornucopia is a traditional symbol of thanksgiving and abundance. It is also an apt symbol for the generosity and helping spirit of those who support the Ross Memorial Hospital Foundation. The gifts we receive encourage and enhance the efforts of Ross Memorial Hospital in providing exceptional local health care.

Giving becomes a legacy - for ourselves and for our community. Our charitable donations speak for us, and as the institution carries on, so does the legacy we support.

At the Ross Memorial Hospital Foundation, we appreciate each and every gift we receive, as they all assist us in enhancing patient care in our community.

We are also grateful to our many local sponsors who have come forward time after time, to assist us with the various initiatives we use to recognize the our donors.

As a supporter of Ross Memorial Hospital, you have made a difference in the health of our community and for that, the Ross Memorial Hospital Foundation is truly thankful.

The Tradition of Giving program is our opportunity to thank you for your support of Ross Memorial Hospital. This program began with the original donor wall and continues to flourish, highlighting our philosophy of recognizing our donors.

One of the most visible ways we thank our donors is through our donor wall program, that has recently expanded.

This program has been strongly supported by Dom & John Fox and their family, who came forward to support the construction of our new donor wall.

These individuals, along with our construction sponsors lead by R.E. Hein, have ensured that we can continue to recognize generosity, and we sincerely thank them for their support.

Local artist and paper sculptor Calvin Nicholls' inspiration was integral to the design of both of our walls and has certainly added a special and unique touch.
